Four Day Symposium
Of Rural Ecclesiasts; Prof.

The Engineering College
Is To Be Accredited

The visiting committee of the Engineering Council on Professional Development, consisting of five noted engineers and educators, officially inspected the College of Engineering Tuesday for the purpose of determining whether that college should be industrially accredited with that organization.

Modern Dancers
Conclude Brilliant
C.K.C.C.A. SeriesFowler and Tamara Please
Capacity Audience With Interpretations

By BETTY EARLE

Addison Fowler and Florenz Tamara, internationally famous dance team, were presented in ultra-modern dance interpretations Tuesday night at Henry Clay auditorium by the Central Kentucky Community Concert association.

Having performed throughout the United States and Europe, Fowler and Tamara offered a varied program, pleasing to any follower of this art. Beginning with an "exotic version of the modern dance, symbolic of East India," their selections continued through a French "Gavotte," continental numbers, Spanish dances, the Tango of 1936, followed by that of 1913, to a satire entitled "The Debutante." The last was especially amusing, allowing adherents of the campus style of dancing to see themselves as they may appear to others. The final encores were in a similar vein, being brief satires on the dance as we commonly see it. The first two concerned the terpsichorean ability of a "tired business man dancing with his wife in a small town," and then the same person "in New York with a chorus girl." Finally Miss Tamara impersonated Gloria Swanson and Mr. Fowler, Charlie Chaplin. Strauss' popular "Blue Danube" was especially well received.

Fowler and Tamara presented themselves in a fascinatingly expressive manner, each number done with the utmost poise of the drama. Their attractive and appropriate costumes added vivid color to all.

Charles Ruetschi was the brilliantly accomplished pianist who played a number of compositions in complement to the dancers' selections.

Prof. R. D. McIntyre again announced the concert program for the coming season. Miss Katharine Meisle, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will open the series, followed by the Jooss European Ballet, the Barrere-Brit concertina, Guimar Novas, Brazilian pianist, and, finally, John Charles Thomas, baritone.

Frances Sadler, Louisville, junior in the College of Education, was elected president of the Association of Women Students, self-government organization for women, in an election conducted by the association yesterday in the Administration building. Voting was done only by women students.

A total of 280 votes was cast in the election. The new president, an active worker in the Y. W. C. A. and president of Boyd hall, won over Dorothy Wunderlich, other candidate for the office. She succeeds Virginia Robinson, retiring head of the association.

Other officers elected were vice-president, Rae Lewis, junior in the College of Commerce, who defeated Mammie Hart; secretary, Dorothy Santen, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, who won over Jane Potter; treasurer, Ruth Johnson, sophomore in the College of Commerce, who defeated Susan Anderson, and town representative, Mary Elizabeth Koppius, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, who defeated Ruth Ecton.

Candidates for the offices were selected by a committee composed of the Dean of Women, the president of the association, and one member of the A. W. S. council whose appointment was approved by that body. This method of nomination was inaugurated this year.

In order to exclude the political bargaining which has characterized campus elections in past years, nominees for the positions were not announced until yesterday, their names appearing for the first time on the ballots.

Eligibility for the presidency of the A. W. S. requires that the girl complete five semesters of college work, at least three in the University. The vice-president must have completed three semesters, two of which must be in the University, and secretary, treasurer, and town representative must have completed two semesters in the University.

ACADEMIC HALITOSIS

People who perform in public are constantly subjected to condemnation or praise. When the comedian's retorts lose their saltiness and freshness, the public turns to someone else. When the politician's candor and power loses its cleverness and strength, the folks back home send in a more convincing replacement. When a ball player loses his reputed effectivity, the bleachers groan and the box seats grumble, "Take him out!"

Another individual who earns his livelihood by competing with the public is the professor. Yet if his performance is uncolorful, unimpressive, his owner whips him not. Thrice weekly he struts into the classroom and attacks his compulsory audience with a 50-minute broadside of academic halitosis. Smug behind his scholarship titles he is a river of wisdom, a murky river of wisdom understood only by his misplaced and out-of-classroom intelligence. His lecture masquerades in frosty, senile verbiage. His "listeners" look to the windows for consolation or prattle with fellow victims for diversion. To combat this, occasionally he bursts with rage, deploring inattention, damning the impolite, and extolling the ease with which he learned his subject. In most cases, the professor was taught this subject by a savant who painted his work with humor, sympathy, and digestible knowledge.

Here in the University are several bland bores whose prominence is blamable on a collegiate peerage (Professor), given to him by educational magnates. It is solely because of this brand (Professor) that students act respectfully towards him. After all we customers are here to graduate. If we are sycophantic enough in our infrequent dealings with the teacher, this informative stone may be flattered to the point of acquiescence and pass us; hence we achieve our aim.

Year after year students complain about the same professors. The employers do nothing about it. Perhaps they are unconscious of this scholastic poison. But this campus disease must be antidoted.

The comedian, the actress, the senator, and the athlete were all fired at the first sign of incompetence. Why spare the professor?

Every man will have his own criterion in forming his judgment of others. I depend very much on the effect of affliction. I consider how a man comes out of the furnace; gold will lie for a month in a furnace without losing a grain.—Richard Cecil.

CAMPUSOUNDS:

Disillusion—"Gee, kids, I heard some seniors say that honoraries are the bunk!"

Sarcasm—"He's been unhappy ever since he discovered that some coeds on the campus don't know who he is—and now that he's found that they don't care, either, he's inconsolable!"

Ridicule—"Why don't you sit down some time and just think? Or can you?"

Horror—"He was trying to tell the gal that he wanted to call the whole thing off, but got so sentimental and flowery while he was doing it that she thought it was a proposal—and now he's stuck!"

Humor—"Can I bring a friend?"

Sentiment—"Of course I love her! Haven't I been flunking all of my classes since we met?"

DON'T LOOK NOW, BUT—you've been writing in my diary the last three days, roommate!

CAMPUSIGHS:

1. Explaining to your heartbeat back home about that little scandal column item.
2. Explaining to your professor about missing that last exam.
3. Explaining to your gal friend about what you were doing with her date the other night.
4. Explaining to your family about why the next check has to be a large one.
5. Explaining.

Seemingly So...

By ODIS LEE HARRIS

According to recent newspaper dispatches the Nazi government of Germany has issued a decree whereby all invalids of Germany are to be made fit for the coming war. The method by which such a miracle is to be accomplished is through an extensive program of physical exercise.

According to the plan the invalids will start with a light exercise with dumb-bells and gradually work into more vigorous forms of exercise such as road work, at the end of which the invalids are expected to march with the regular army with packs on their backs. A more appropriate wording of the plan is that Germany's "dumb-bell" will start the invalids off with mild exercise.

This and many other decrees of the Hitler government cannot help but bring forth contempt and disgust from democratic countries. Such decrees easily point out the brutality of the German government and promote a feeling of pity for the German people.

The man, Hitler, is a character to incite the most passive imagination. One often wonders if he and others like him are not born in incubators. It is hard to believe that men of this type could have had a mother.

The tactics of Hitler and his right-hand men are inhuman, unjust, and contradictory to all religious, moral, and mental ethics. Just how far Hitler intends to go in this suppression may be seen in the fact that he is to have himself supplanted for Christ in the Bible.

It is not for this writer of this column to start expounding his or anyone else's religious beliefs, but in regard to Hitler, the writer feels safe in saying that all Christian religions regard him in somewhat the same manner.

Even the most religious of persons, whether they will admit it or not, must revel in the satisfaction that in the life beyond this world there will be some sort of reckoning for those who here on earth have been dealt unmercifully with their fellow beings.

There is a sublime satisfaction in the knowledge that revenge and justice will be meted out to such persons. But at the same time one cannot help but feel sorry for such individuals whose destiny is without hope, whose soul is without compassion, and whose very existence is either openly or secretly despised by the world.

It is indeed a paradoxical situation in which one can hate and pity a person at the same time.

Did You Know—
Prof. Sutherland, the University's gift to oratory, built his own home, made his own furniture, milks his own cows, wove a suit for himself and wore it. He invites all who do not believe this to come to his home. He says he is going to name his eight acre farm either "Belly Acres" or "Bad Manors."

The Murphy-Rawlins Pinning
The bets being place on the campus as to how long it will last would keep the house of Lloyd busy for months. Why don't you dopes quit betting against Betty? Maybe she ain't never had the love bug bite her before.

Judy McVean and Betty Lou Holstein get the cups for Champion Wheelers of 1937. In record time of one day the McVean-Holstein team defeated the Davis-Goforth team for the possession of the little gold S. E. C. Basketballs. The story goes that they had bought little gold chains to wear them around their necks for a week before they came in.

A premeditated crime swept the third floor of Patterson hall April 1. KD Miriam Gardhouse and Billy Vance purchased a sufficient amount of molasses at the corner grocery to glue all the inmates of the third floor to their beds.

Upon being caught the girls stated that they had nothing to say. The housemother said it for them though, to the tune of two dollars each to pay for the scouring of the sheets.

Won't the newcomers ever learn that the fire escape trick won't work anymore? Sarah Ransdall, Nancy Todd, Frances Farahongh and Amelia Talbot were caught red-handed a few nights ago. As a result they shall be imprisoned within the four walls of the University Bastille for the forthcoming week.

Harold Bush must be the man of the semester with KD Miriam Gardhouse. The story goes that they were parked in the side entrance of Patterson hall waiting to toll the knell of parting day when they lost all sense of time and came back to reality about 20 minutes too late to be received at the hall without ringing the night bell. Consequently a week-end campus for Miriam and a lonely week-end for Harold.

Annual Alumni Day

OHIO TO HEAR McVEY, TAYLOR

Man-Made Sand
Storms Are Now
On Exhibition

Floods, and now sand storms! Sand storms in Kentucky? Yes, in the heart of the Blue Grass, shifting sands have completely engulfed one whole area and have completely buried two houses in that area. State geologists say there is no danger, however, of the sand spreading to other sections of the state as the condition is only one of local extent.

Is this geological phenomena a result of soil erosion, or is it brought about through lack of soil preservation? Is it a result of improper farming or lack of rain? No, this sand storm was not caused by any of these conditions. In fact, this sandy area only covers about 18 square feet; the sand is only two inches deep and the sand covered houses are only three inches high.

These Central Kentucky sand storms are man made and are completely glass enclosed so that no one need worry about the sands shifting to other sections of the state. The department of geology at the University has a small model of a typical sand storm area, run by a blower fan.

The students at the University use this small working model in their geology studies. The blower is set at one end of the glass-enclosed model and can be set at different speeds to correspond with wind changes similar to real storms. The sand is allowed to blow against small houses set up in the model, and according to natural processes the sand slowly catches against the houses and gradually engulfs them until small sand dunes are formed. Later the dunes shift on and new ones take their place, just like a typical western dust storm.

According to University geology instructors, Kentuckians won't have to worry about sand or dust storms ever covering their homes. In fact, the nearest sand-covered area is in Dune Park, Mich. Therefore, we will only have to concern ourselves with the flood situations and for the present, let the sands "shift for themselves."

Seeing Sport Stuff

By TOM WATKINS

Kernel Sports Editor

STUNG BY THE DEFEAT handed them Saturday afternoon by the Dark Blue team, Coach Chet Wynne's Light Blue gridmen thoroughly trounced the former eleven on the practice field Wednesday afternoon by the lopsided score of 24-0, in the second practice game of the spring session. The Light Blue gridders started their scoring spree late in the first half when Walter Hodge intercepted a pass and ran fifteen yards for a touchdown. Three other touchdowns followed, one of them on a spectacular run by Jimmy Wadlington.

The mistakes of Saturday afternoon proved advantageous to both elevens Wednesday, as they both showed improvement, but there is still an immense number of corrections to be made. Questioned as to the respective merits of his men, Coach Wynne stated, "Until a regularly scheduled game has been played, they all look the same to me." He added, however, that some men had shown improvement, and should be dark horse contenders for positions next season.

A notable feature of Wednesday's game was the improvement shown by the Blue Diamond Blimp, Luke Lindon. This pachyderm was to be seen at the bottom of nearly every pile-up with his mighty arms pinning the ball-carrier down. With the same progress shown in last Saturday's tilt, Lindon has exhibited perhaps the greatest improvement of any man on the squad, and will loom as a threat to the other tackles when September rolls around.

The Brooklyn Dodgers' professional football club might well be called the finishing school for University of Kentucky players. In 1932, after his graduation from this institution, "Shipwreck" Kelly made his debut as one of the Dodger halfbacks, playing with the great Chris Cagle of Army fame. Two years later, the master punter, Ralph Kercheval, signed up the Brooklyn club and immediately became one of the most able novices of all professional gridders. This year, Brooklyn will receive another prize package when another star Kentucky back, Bert Johnson, arrives in New York for his debut with the Dodgers. He will be a teammate of the redoubtable Kercheval, but not of Kelly, as the latter has hung up his cleats to supervise the activities of the squad.

Kentucky's famous "dry-land" swimming team is at present enjoying a short respite before engaging some of the collegiate clubs of the state again. This organization, without a pool of its own, has defeated several of the teams of K. I. A. C. colleges including Berea and Eastern. Sherman Hinkelein, Louisville's leading lifeguard, is captain of the team, and has as his assistants such valuable men as Bob Sherman, the pride of Cincinnati, Bob Freeberg, Ronald Sharp and others. Plums to this most plucky organization from this column.

Sport oddities—Jesse Owens, the Olympic star, is following the lead of many famous people and capitalizing on his name by a hot dance band... Dartmouth College revealed that a certain California concern offered to sell them wholesale prices any number of guaranteed A-1 high-school athletes... Ducky Simrall, native Kentuckian and captain of the Michigan Wolverines several years ago, scored all his many points on field goals—he never carried the ball... Red Grange, the Illinois All-American, carried the ball four times in one game against Michigan and scored four touchdowns... Johnny Moir, star Notre Dame basketball, is so nearsighted that he can hardly see the basket from the foul line...
